

BRAND GUIDELINE

COLOURPIG™

01 THE PURPOSE OF THE DOCUMENT

Brand guidelines serve as a comprehensive framework to ensure consistency and cohesion in how a brand is presented across various platforms and mediums. They outline the standards for visual and verbal elements, such as logos, color palettes, typography, and tone of voice, providing clear instructions on their proper use.

By adhering to these guidelines, a brand can maintain a unified identity, build recognition, and effectively communicate its values and message. This consistency not only reinforces brand trust and loyalty among consumers but also streamlines the creative process for internal teams and external partners, ensuring that all brand expressions align with the strategic vision.

02 COLOURPIG OVERVIEW

Colourpig by Norman & Brown is the world's first reusable, air-driven precision hair colour system. We've engineered a solution to an industry that hasn't evolved in decades—eliminating 90% of product waste and 75% of plastic through proprietary air-compression technology. This isn't incremental improvement. This is colour, completely reimaged.

Colourpig represents pigment precision—the science of delivering exactly what you need, nothing you don't. The name is singular and deliberate: pigment at its purest, with the subtlest reference to our origins.

A BRAND MISSION

To obsolete traditional hair colour through superior engineering.

For over a century, at-home hair colour has been fundamentally broken. Single-use bottles. Excessive waste. Imprecise application. We're not here to improve it—we're here to replace it. Colourpig is engineered from first principles: air-driven compression delivers 10-20ml of precise pigment versus the industry standard 100ml waste. Our reusable cartridge system cuts plastic by 75%. The result is salon-grade colour that lives in your shower, ready when you are. This is technology that respects both your intelligence and the planet. No compromises.

B BRAND VISION

To become the standard for intelligent colour care. We're building the future where single-use hair colour is as out-dated as disposable cameras. In five years, Colourpig will be the obvious choice—the brand that proved precision engineering belongs in personal care.

Norman & Brown bring decades of colour mastery. That expertise, combined with breakthrough air-compression technology, positions us to redefine an entire category. We're not chasing trends. We're setting the new standard. From early adopters who recognize innovation to the mainstream who demand better—we're building a movement of intelligent consumers who refuse to accept waste as inevitable.

C BRAND ARCHETYPE

C BRAND ARCHETYPE

01 THE CREATOR
Primary Archetype

We didn't improve hair colour—we reimaged it from nothing. Air-compression technology. Reusable cartridge systems. Precision dosing. This is design and engineering at its purest: building something entirely new that will endure. We create solutions where others accepted limitations.

02 THE MAGICIAN
Secondary Archetype

We're transforming a century of hair colour history. What was wasteful is now precise. What was single-use is now reusable. What required salons now lives in your shower. This is category transformation—we're changing the fundamental rules of how colour works.

03 THE REBEL
Tirtiary Archetype

We reject the status quo. For decades, the industry sold waste as inevitable. Imprecision as acceptable. Disposability as normal. We're not here to play by those rules. We're here to make them obsolete. This is intelligent rebellion dismantling outdated systems through superior engineering.

TARGET AUDIENCE 11

TONE OF VOICE 12

TALKING RULES 13

A TARGET AUDIENCE

01 | Primary Audience: Intelligent Early Adopters (25-40)

Emma, 32, is a product designer or tech professional who recognizes breakthrough innovation instantly. She was early to Tesla and premium DTC brands because she reads specifications and dismisses hype. Frustrated by beauty industry stagnation, she seeks brands that challenge outdated norms through real engineering. Sustainability matters only when engineered in, not green-washed on. She pays premium for genuinely superior products and evangelizes discoveries to her network. She buys Dyson, Apple, Glossier, and Aesop. Converting Emma means converting her entire circle of influence.

02 | Secondary Audience: Conscious Professionals (30-50)

Sophia, 38, is a strategy consultant or VP who lives by "fewer things, better things." Time is her currency—she measures value in minutes saved and problems solved elegantly. Exhausted by beauty products that overpromise, she's deeply skeptical. Traditional hair colour wastes time, creates plastic guilt, and disrespects her intelligence. She wants salon results without scheduling nightmares and pays premium for smart solutions. When something works, she becomes a loyal advocate in professional circles. She invests in Cuyana, The Row, and Le Labo.

03 | Tertiary Audience: Quality-Conscious Pragmatists (40-60)

At 48, this senior executive has seen every trend come and go. She's skeptical of hype but open to credible innovation. She wants proven expertise, reliable results, and heritage she can trust. Monthly salons are expensive and time-consuming, yet box dyes feel cheap. Norman & Brown's salon heritage is the credibility bridge she needs. She invests in La Mer, Augustinus Bader, and proven brands. She requires trust-building but offers exceptional lifetime value once loyal.

04 | Quaternary Audience: Discerning Silver Generation (60+)

Margaret, 68, is a retired professional who values simplicity and reliability. She's covered gray for decades through expensive salons or messy box dyes—tired of both. Skeptical of trendy brands, she responds to engineering credibility and proven expertise. Norman & Brown's salon heritage is crucial—she trusts decades of mastery over clever marketing. She wants intuitive, consistent systems without complicated tutorials. Her purchasing power is significant, loyalty unwavering, and word-of-mouth influence strong within her demographic. For Colourpig, she's the ultimate test of truly intuitive engineering.

B TONE OF VOICE

03 BRAND MARK —

WORDMARK	16–17
EMBLEM	18
MASCOT	19–20
LOGO LOCK UP	21
LOGO MISUSE	22

A WORDMARK*(PRI.)*

The ColourPig primary logo embraces a minimal, futuristic aesthetic, defined by clean geometry, balanced spacing, and a sleek sans-serif letterform system. Its structure feels engineered and intentional, with elongated curves and precise proportions that give it a modern, tech-forward presence.

At the heart of the wordmark, the “O” in COLOUR is reimagined as a stylised pig snout — a bold, circular form containing two perfectly shaped nostril cutouts. This subtle yet iconic symbol becomes the brand’s core identifier: simple, clever, and instantly recognisable.

The overall composition blends playfulness with sophistication, ensuring ColourPig communicates creativity and character while maintaining a polished, contemporary visual language.

A WORDMARK^(SEC.)

The stacked ColourPig logo places COLOUR above PIG, creating a vertical lock-up designed for tight spaces and constrained layouts. This configuration maintains the brand’s minimal, futuristic aesthetic while prioritizing clarity and legibility at smaller scales.

The signature pig-snout “O” remains the focal point, ensuring brand recognition even when the logo footprint is reduced. By stacking the two words, the mark becomes more compact, balanced, and efficient, making it ideal for use on small packaging areas, product labels, corner placements, or any application where horizontal space is limited.

Used sparingly and intentionally, the stacked logo acts as a secondary, space-optimized version of the primary identity — retaining all the brand’s personality while adapting seamlessly to tighter design environments.

B EMBLEM

The ColourPig emblem is a distilled, stand-alone version of the brand's most recognizable element: the circular "O" shaped like a pig nose. Formed by a bold ring with two perfectly balanced nostril cutouts, the emblem captures the brand's entire personality in a single, minimal symbol.

Its geometry is clean, modern, and futuristic — a simple form with character, charm, and instant memorability. Because it carries both the essence of the name and the visual identity, the emblem functions as a universal brand stamp: compact, iconic, and unmistakably ColourPig.

This mark is used in tight or decorative contexts — such as micro-labels, seals, pattern systems, social icons, or small packaging marks — where the full wordmark may not fit.

C MASCOT

The QOMY logo embodies the brand's essence of precision and brevity through a bold, literal gesture — a sharp diagonal cut slicing through the wordmark. This clean slash visually represents the idea of “cutting it short,” capturing the brand's focus on speed, clarity, and control in post-production.

The strong, geometric typeface conveys confidence and reliability, while the electric blue color adds a modern, trustworthy tone. Together, these elements create a mark that feels both fast and deliberate — a visual symbol of QOMY's ability to deliver sharp results without excess.

C MASCOT

Dr. Pig is the friendly, minimal mascot that personifies the ColourPig universe. Built from clean, geometric shapes, the character features a bold circular head, soft curved ears, and the signature pig-snout “O” at its center — making it instantly connected to the core brand identity.

His design is intentionally simple and modern, allowing him to appear across packaging, digital content, and promotional materials without overwhelming the minimalist aesthetic. Dr. Pig brings warmth, humor, and approachability to the brand, acting as a playful guide through the world of colour, care, and creativity.

Used sparingly and with purpose, he adds character and storytelling, becoming the brand’s memorable face while maintaining ColourPig’s sleek, futuristic tone.
